Pittsburgh, July 17.—The Giants defeated the Pirates 3 to 1, this afternoon in the longest game in the history of the National League, the clubs battling for twenty-one innings before the visitors finally won out. In the twenty-first inning, after two were out, Bescher singled, stole second, and scored ahead of Doyle, who hit to deep centre for a home run. Both teams scored early in the game. The Pirates sent a run across in the first inning, when Menken was hit by a pitch, and went on to score on a Mowery sacrifice, which was followed on a triple to left centre by Wagner. The Giants tied the score in the third, Bescher led off with a single, then scored on a sacrifice fly by Barnes. A striking feature of the long game was the remarkable pitching of Hubert Marquard, for the Pirates. He pitched through the entire twenty-one innings and finished comparatively strong, and while Adams allowed only twelve hits to his equals, he allowed only seven to the visitors, and in a single game, in that he allowed only one extra base-walker. Wagner's three-bagger, while Adams was touched up for a triple by Barnes and a home run by Larry Doyle.
